(I)

When I get to the village, I feel its peace and calm. I take a pleasant stroll through quiet lanes enjoying the aroma of bread freshly made. It's a quiet place. I enjoy the tranquility.

I wake up late, and take breakfast outdoors. I love the shade under the trees, the smell of the countryside. My senses are awakened. I feel happy.

Tomorrow I will work with the shoes, feel the soft touch of leather and cotton, the natural qualities of jute, the texture of kid suede, the freshness of linen, and the pleasure of working with artisans. And I will enjoy, once more, time spent in a calm space, surrounded by peace and beauty.

Nights of chat and laughter, of eternal friendships, of joy. The dance, the moon, the songs that we like. Looks that shine, hugs and toasts. And if the dawn catches us, we enjoy the sun. Life is ours.

And when I come back, the fast-paced streets are like friendly roads in the grove. The asphalt, a mantle of grass, a sandy beach. I walk, I speed up, I stop.

I appease the city like a countryside landscape sunset. The harmony is in my feet.
